Henry B. duPont Preservation Shipyard

Mystic Seaport's Preservation Shipyard is a unique world famous facility which has the equipment and craftsmen required to perform any task in the restoration and preservation of wooden vessels. Completed in 1972, the shipyard consists of a large main shop, where a visitors' gallery overlooks carpenters' shops, an 85-foot spar lathe, a rigging loft and a large open area where vessels are brought indoors for repair. A paint shop and metal working shop, documentation shop, lumber shed and saw mill are nearby. Central to the facility is a 375-ton capacity lift dock capable of raising any of the museum's ships out of the water for repair or maintenance.

Bernie mentioned a demonstration on October 8 by Sorby at RI Woodcraft store.

Bob Allen reported on a meeting held to discuss the AAW symposium to be held in Hartford, CT. in 2010. Volunteers are needed to work on video cameras at demonstrations. Training seminars will be held.

Ken demonstrated adding feet to bowls

Adding three feet to the bottom of a bowl requires a flat rim. He uses a Delta face plate and friction chuck during turning. After location of feet are marked a small grinder with a Denker tool removes most of the material.

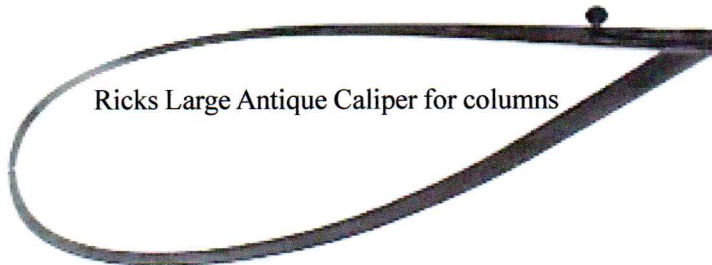

He also uses a table saw to remove waste and finally a sanding disc to finish.
